
- I divide the places I visited into 4 types of area.

01. Riverside

Qinhuangdao Rd. & Dock

Areas by the Huangpu River.

02. Old town

Huoshan Rd. --- Anguo Rd.

Areas with a group of old Shanghai neighborhoods.

03. Building construction site

Feihong Rd. --- Hongzhen Old Street

Areas used to have old neighborhoods and now constructing high-rise residential buildings

04. Modern urban area

Peace Park --- Tongji

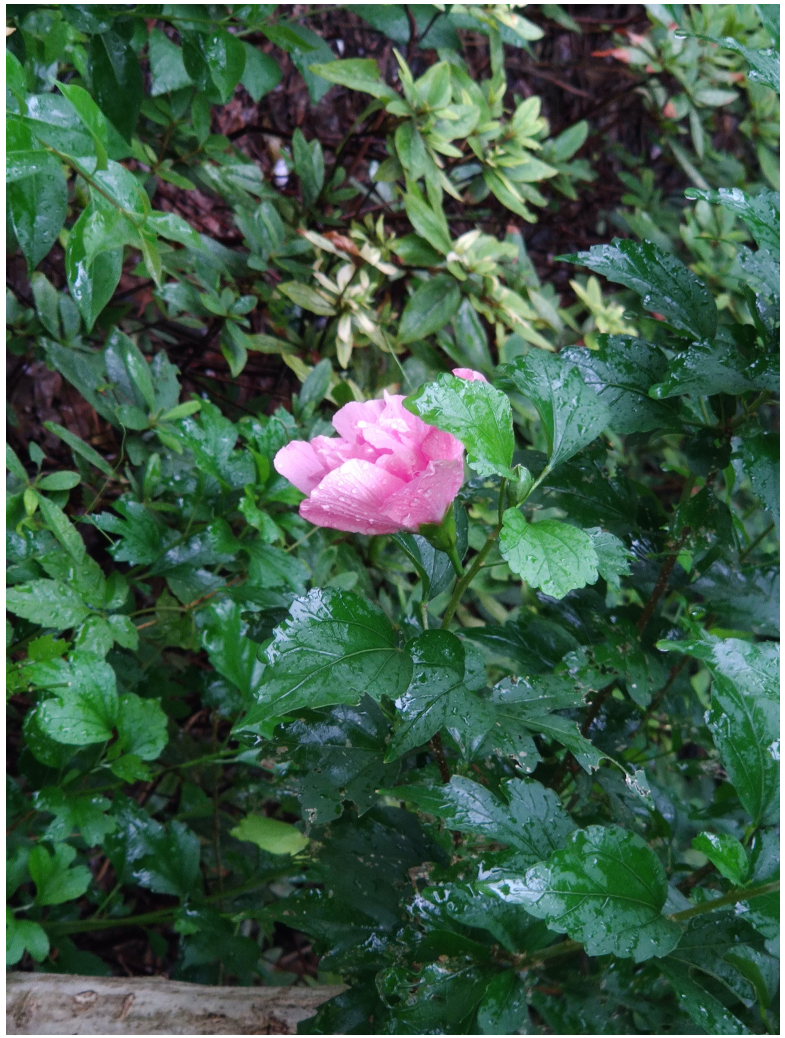
The most common area in Shanghai.

01. Riverside

Plants shiver in the rain

Sensorial feelings

@ Qinhuangdao Rd.



Rain magnifies sound and scent.

Camphor: leaves shiver in the rain, making its scent more obvious.

01. Riverside

Tiny garden behind a commercial building

@ Qinhuangdao Rd.

Sensorial feelings

It's easy to be triggered by unexpected sensorial feelings.

02. Old town

People plant plants in numerous containers

@ Zhoushan Rd.

02. Old town

People plant plants in numerous containers

@ Zhoushan Rd.

WHY people grow plants everywhere here?

- Save money (dont need to buy in market)
- Convenient (pickup & cook; not much care)
- Pleasure of life (have some accompany and sth to care about)

02. Old town

Nature elements in daily objects

@ Zhoushan Rd.

People just leave those daily products by the street, and plants naturally grow on it.
When I saw the vine on this chair, I found it a cute little piece of furniture.

02. Old town

Great population of vine (on cables)

@ Anguo Rd.

People are keen on growing Sigua: it's a multifunctional vegetable?

In old town area, I can feel a strong evidence of people's leading a life here, and plants just naturally be a part of this lifestyle.

02. Old town

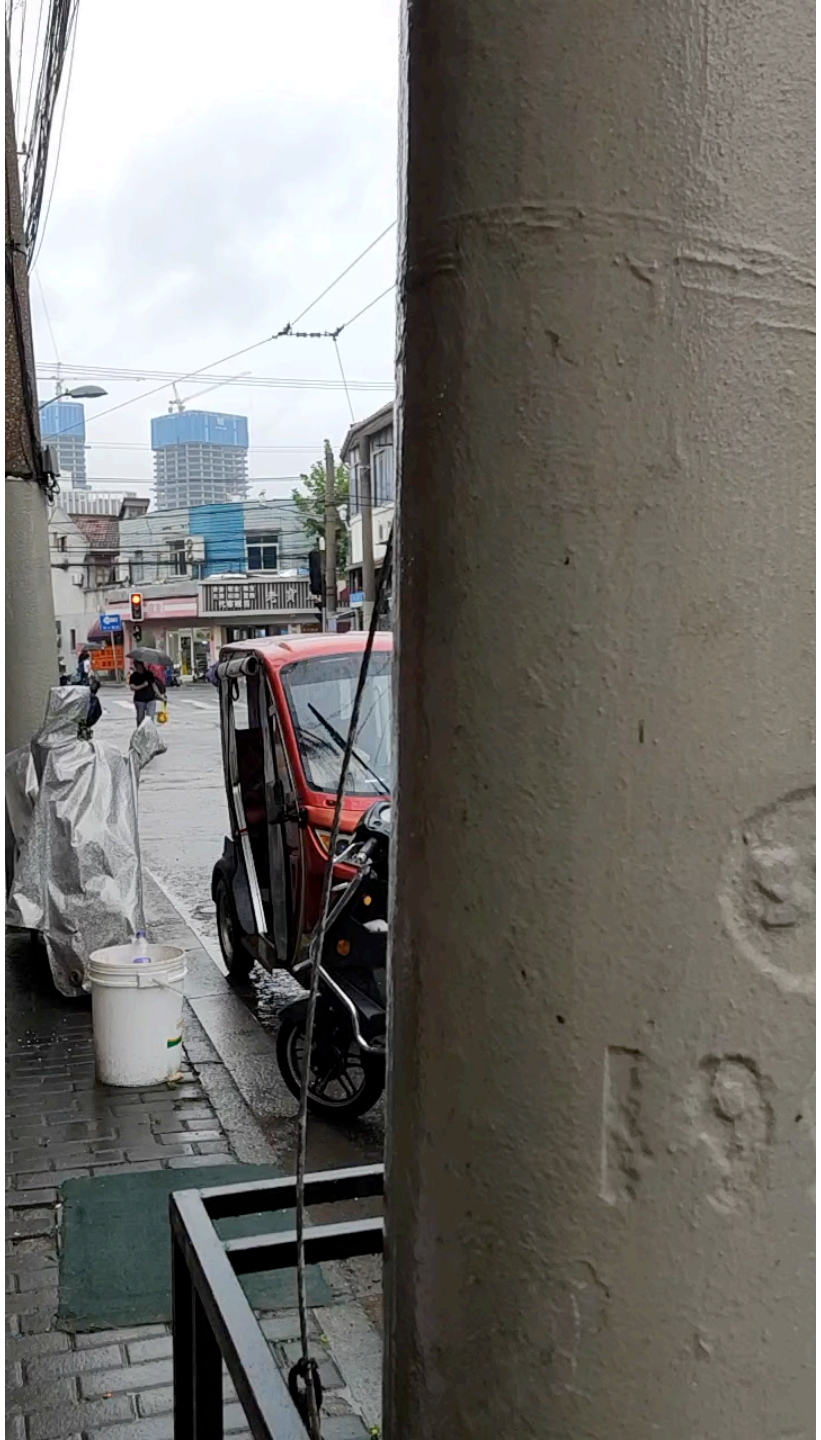
Existence of Rain

@ Anguo Rd.

02. Old town

Existence of Rain

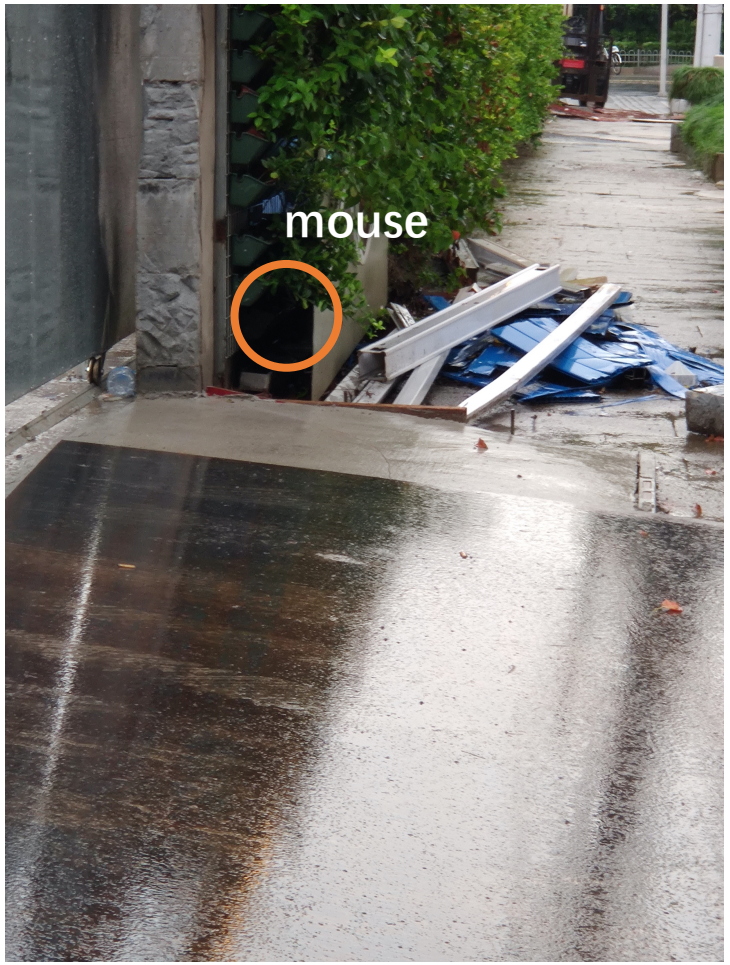
A self-made water channel, bringing rain water to the ground, looks like a tiny waterfall.



03. Building construction site

Plants used as walls to block noise

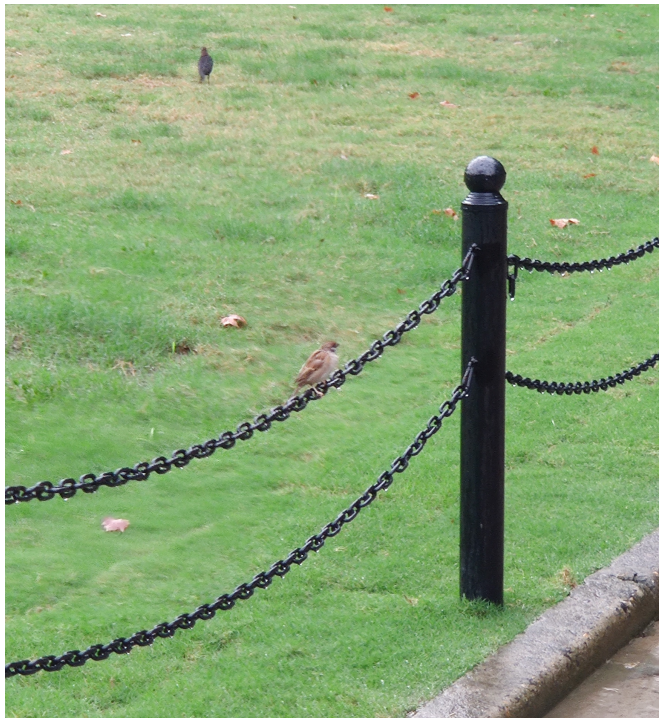
@ Hongzhen Old Street



There's always plants on the wall of building construction site,
I guess it meets the official standard of urban greening.

04. Modern urban area “designed ” for city life: Plants - Barrier - Street @ Lintong Rd.

04. Modern urban area

Peace Park: birds finding food in rain


@ Peace Park
